The Australian Council of State School Organisations (ACSSO) congratulates Alan Tudge, on his appointment on Friday to the role of Minister for Education and Youth as a result of the Federal Cabinet reshuffle. The Prime Minister stated that coming into this role, the Minister has a clear brief of improving education outcomes and, in particular, helping younger Australians navigate challenges in a rapidly changing world.

“Following the challenges that 2020 has brought, we look forward to what plans the new Minister has to support schools. This year has been a trial for families – our National Survey clearly identified huge inequities in access and opportunity – innovative, flexible and adaptive classrooms are required, and governments need to respond.” Said Sharron Healy, President, ACSSO

We have much to learn from this year and we look, in anticipation, to Minister Tudge for the action required to ensure that the events of 2020 have minimal impact on students

We take this opportunity to thank Minister Tehan and wish him well in his new portfolio
