Australian Council of State School Organisations Limited

Damien Elwood Appointed New President of ACSSO

Following its Annual General Meeting, the Australian Council of State School Organisations (ACSSO) is pleased to announce the election of Damien Elwood as its new President. He follows Sharron Healy, who has retired after a distinguished tenure.

Damien Elwood, known for his dedication and innovative approach, will take over the reins immediately. With a proven track record in advocating for quality education and his significant contributions in various roles, Damien is poised to lead ACSSO into its next chapter of growth and impact.

"We are thrilled to welcome Damien as our new President," said Di Giblin AM, ACSSO CEO. "His vision for education and his commitment to the values of ACSSO make him the ideal leader to build on the strong foundation laid by his predecessor, Sharron Healy."

Sharron has been commended for her outstanding leadership and dedication during her time as President. Under her guidance, ACSSO achieved significant milestones and strengthened its role as a pivotal voice in the education sector. The ACSSO community expresses its deepest gratitude to Sharron for her service and wishes her well in her future endeavours.

Damien Elwood expressed his enthusiasm about his new role, saying, "I am honoured to be given the opportunity to lead ACSSO. I look forward to working with our members, partners, and the broader education community to continue advocating for excellence in state school education and family engagement. We have a bright future ahead, and I am excited to be a part of this journey."

The ACSSO team is confident that under Damien's leadership, the organisation will continue to make significant strides in representing the interests of government school students, their families, and communities across Australia.
